Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 10 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Windy with rain at times.

Today:
After the wet and windy weather last night, this morning will be briefly drier and less windy with a few sunny spells possible in the north. However, cloud and rain will return this afternoon with winds strengthening again. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Very windy overnight with gales in places, especially over the Pennines. Frequent heavy, blustery showers will push through, with more persistent rain setting in later in the night. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Thursday:
Heavy rain will ease through the morning to leave a day of sunny spells and scattered heavy showers. Winds will remain strong throughout and it will feel chilly. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Staying windy on Friday with sunshine and heavy, blustery showers. Perhaps some heavier rain early Saturday before it becomes drier and less windy later. Mainly dry and bright on Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.